Combat & Resource Protection

Maintaining peace and protecting resources are essential to the strength and stability of State 775.

This chapter outlines the official combat and resource protection regulations established by the NAP10 alliance leadership and enforced by the State 775 Defense Department.

Players will learn the rules governing Headquarters (HQ) attacks, hive attack limits, bounty collection, truck looting, and mining locations.

These regulations are designed to prevent unnecessary conflicts, protect fellow survivors, and encourage fair competition while allowing strategic gameplay.

All alliances and players within State 775 are expected to follow these rules.

Remember: Be strategic, not destructive. A stronger State 775 begins with cooperation and respect.

Introduction

Combat is an important part of Last Z: Survival Shooter, but unnecessary destruction weakens the entire server.

State 775 has established combat regulations to encourage strategic gameplay, prevent excessive attacks, and protect the long-term strength of our alliances.

These rules were approved by the majority of NAP10 alliance leaders and apply to all players and alliances within State 775.

Rule 1 — No Unnecessary HQ Attacks

Official Rule: Attacking an HQ for resources is allowed. Repeatedly attacking an HQ until it is forced into the cemetery is strictly prohibited.

What Is Allowed?

- Attacking another player's Headquarters (HQ) to collect resources.
- Conducting strategic attacks without intentionally causing excessive destruction.
- Participating in combat while respecting the server's other rules and restrictions.

What Is Prohibited?

- Repeatedly attacking the same HQ until it is forced into the cemetery.
- Continuing unnecessary attacks for the purpose of destroying or displacing another player.
- Using resource collection as an excuse to deliberately eliminate another player's HQ.

Why This Rule Matters

Every active player contributes to the strength of State 775.

Excessive attacks can discourage participation, damage alliances, and reduce the server's overall ability to compete in larger events.

Remember: Be strategic, not destructive!

Rule 2 — Maximum 3 Attacking HQs Per Hive

Official Rule: A maximum of three attacking Headquarters in total may attack a hive, whether those attackers belong to the same alliance or different alliances.

Understanding the Three-HQ Limit

When attacking a hive, no more than three attacking HQs in total may participate.

This restriction applies collectively across alliances, not separately to each alliance.

Example: Allowed

Three players coordinate an attack on a hive.

- Player A — Alliance 1
- Player B — Alliance 1
- Player C — Alliance 2

Total: 3 attacking HQs — Allowed.

Example: Prohibited

Two players from Alliance 1 and two players from Alliance 2 attack the same hive.

Total: 4 attacking HQs — Prohibited.

Even though the attackers belong to different alliances, the combined number exceeds the permitted limit.

Why This Rule Matters

The three-HQ limit is intended to prevent large-scale conflicts from escalating into server-wide wars.

By limiting the number of attackers, State 775 encourages controlled engagements and reduces unnecessary destruction.

Remember: Never more than three attacking HQs per hive.

Important Reminders

Before initiating combat, always consider the following:

1. Is the attack permitted under State 775 regulations?
2. Will the attack violate the three-HQ hive limit?
3. Are you following the restrictions for the current day or event?
4. Could your actions create unnecessary conflict?

These combat permissions do not override other server restrictions, including Sunday Peace Day and protected events.

When uncertain, ask your alliance leadership or the State 775 Defense Department before taking action.

Bounties, Trucks & Mining Rules

Introduction

Resources, bounty rewards, and supply trucks are essential for developing stronger Headquarters, upgrading troops, and preparing for major events in Last Z: Survival Shooter.

However, taking rewards or resources from fellow State 775 players creates unnecessary conflict and weakens our server.

To encourage cooperation and protect our community, State 775 has established three important resource protection regulations.

These rules apply to all players and alliances within State 775.

Rule 3 — No Bounty Stealing on State 775

Official Rule: Stealing bounty rewards from players on our own server is strictly prohibited.

What Is Prohibited?

- Stealing bounty rewards belonging to fellow State 775 players.
- Deliberately targeting bounty rewards from players on our home server.

- Taking another State 775 player's bounty reward simply because it is available.

What Is Allowed?

Players may collect bounty rewards from other servers, preferably from our current Server vs. Server (SvS) opponent.

Why This Rule Matters

Bounty rewards help players develop their accounts and strengthen their alliances.

Taking these rewards from fellow State 775 players creates unnecessary competition and conflict within our own community.

Remember: Loot enemy servers, not your fellow State 775 survivors!

If you are unsure how to target bounties on another server, ask an experienced player or alliance leader for assistance.

Rule 4 — No Truck Looting on Our Server

Official Rule: Looting trucks belonging to players on State 775 is strictly forbidden.

What Is Prohibited?

- Attacking or looting supply trucks belonging to State 775 players.
- Deliberately selecting trucks from our own server.
- Ignoring server filters when choosing a truck to attack.

What Is Allowed?

Players are encouraged to loot trucks belonging to enemy servers, particularly our current SvS opponent.

How to Avoid Looting State 775 Trucks

1. Open the truck looting interface.
2. Locate the server filter in the upper-left corner.
3. Check the filter settings before selecting a target.
4. Make sure you are not targeting a truck from State 775.
5. Select an eligible truck from another server.

Why This Rule Matters

Supply trucks carry valuable rewards that help players improve their accounts.

Looting our own server's trucks takes resources away from fellow survivors and can lead to unnecessary disputes between alliances.

Remember: Check your filters before attacking!

Rule 5 — Don't Steal Mines

Official Rule: If a mine is occupied or another player is already on the way to it, find another location.

What Is Prohibited?

- Taking over a mine already occupied by another player.
- Targeting a mine when another player is already traveling toward it.
- Deliberately interfering with another player's mining activity.

What Should You Do Instead?

1. Check whether the mine is already occupied.
2. Look for incoming troops or another player approaching the mine.
3. If the location is occupied or claimed by an incoming march, choose another available mine.
4. Respect other players' mining activities.

Why This Rule Matters

Mining locations provide valuable resources needed for continued development.

Respecting occupied mines and incoming marches helps prevent disputes while allowing players to gather resources peacefully.

Remember: If someone is already there or on the way, find another spot!

---

Quick Reference — Resource Protection Rules

| Rule | Regulation | Required Action |
|---|---|---|
| 3 | No Bounty Stealing | Collect bounties from other servers |
| 4 | No Truck Looting | Check filters and target other servers |
| 5 | Don't Steal Mines | Avoid occupied mines and incoming marches |

Protecting Our Server Starts With You

Every player contributes to the long-term success of State 775.

By respecting bounty rewards, supply trucks, and mining locations, we create a stronger community where players can develop without unnecessary internal conflict.

Before taking resources, ask yourself:

- Am I targeting someone from State 775?
- Have I checked the appropriate server filters?
- Is another player already occupying or traveling toward this resource?
- Could my actions violate the server's rules?

If you are unsure, contact your alliance leadership or the State 775 Defense Department before acting.
